Though classes have been moved online and most university events have been canceled, the pantry in the Student Nutrition Access Center is as busy as ever. Dedicated volunteers are...

* Doing weekly visits to the Cache Community Food Pantry to load up on nonperishable items
* Driving to Oakdell Farms in Lewiston to buy fresh eggs once per week
* Picking up unsold food from USU Dining Locations each morning
* Repackaging unused food from the USU Marketplace into ready-to-heat meals
* Implementing a new online ordering and home delivery program for SNAC patrons who are social distancing

Student leaders are also busy promoting SNAC’s first Aggie Funded campaign, aiming to raise $15,000 online to expand SNAC’s capacity in the coming school year.

Three cheers for these volunteers who are giving their time and energy! Interested in volunteering? Contact james.wirth@aggiemail.usu.edu to ask where help is needed, and make sure to share our Aggie Funded campaign with anyone who wants to support the work of SNAC.
